An outstanding country retreat encompassing more than 450 acres in the scenic Catoclin Mountains of Maryland, only one hour from Washington, D.C.

r Located just down the mountain from Camp David, this unique property features its own two-mile private wild trout stream. President Eisenhower, an enthusiastic and experienced fly fisherman, was a frequent guest at Trout Run during and after his terms as Chief Executive. The outdoors man's paradise encompasses more than 450 acres and offers hunting for wild turkey, grouse and deer, as well as fishing for brook and brown trout in a beautiful stream termed by officials of Maryland's Department of Natural Resources as the "finest wild trout stream of which we are aware." Wooded trails for hiking, horseback riding and off-the-road vehicle driving surround a central compound that offers a 75' x 30' swimming pool filled with 100,000 gallons of clear mountain stream water, a sports court that provides playing opportunities for some 20 games ranging from tennis to volleyball. The property, located less than an hour drive from the Washington or Baltimore beltways, is ideal for use as a conference center, recreational club, corporate or embassy hideaway, multi-family vacations or simply as a fabulous residence in an immensely private setting.
